Admiral Home Popham's telegraphic signal codes were published in 1799 and revised in 1803,1813 and 1816. Each letter in the alphabet was allocated a number except for I & J which had one for both, also V comes before U. The first and second part, numbers 26 to 996 and 126 to 1996 were arranged alphabetically. These signals were usually recorded in the form of a word with variations. I.e. signal 32 Accept-ed-ing-ance, I have where possible translated into the appropriate words. So signal 32 is recorded as Accept. Accepted. Accepting. Acceptance. The third part 2026 to 2993 were a series of complex messages arranged alphabetically by subject. I.e. signal 2349 Harbour: I am not acquainted with that harbour. If you find any words where I have made a mistake please inform me so I can up date, some of the words I have never heard of but were probably acceptable in the 19th Century.

Certain numbers are missed through out the dictionary probably to stop confusion when hoisted. I.e. 121 or 1211 it seems to be where ever two identical number that are separated by another so 131, 141, 595, 1595 and so on.
